Captain Fonck Thursday night was honor guest at a private dinner given at his mansion by the governor to a few family friends, and in the afternoon he was entertained by the local Alliance Francaise. This morning he is going to Stone mountain, and, during his stay, will look over the municipal flying field and other local points of interest. He probably will remain here for several days.

Captain Fonck's record shows that, during the world war, on one occasion he brought down three German planes in 10 seconds, and another time necounted for six in one hour. The French ace is a crack marksman, and proved this during the hunting trip with the governor in the Okefenokee swamp last week, when he shot two deer with one shot, and brought down the biggest number of quail and ducks of any in the party.

The governor Thursday also told how, during the trip through the Okefenokee, his party discovered a skeleton and other fossil remains, a number of earthen idols and bits of ancient flint, indicative of the possibility that a prehistoric race once lived there. These things were found, he said, mostly on an island beneath a tremendous old cypress tree. Members of the party brought back various souvenirs of this character.

The governor said he was much impressed with the clarity of the water in the great swamp, the total absence of mosquitoes and the generally health.

Goff argued that the state of North Dakota had never, through its legislature, given the governor authority to fill vacancies in the senate since the adoption of the amendment to the constitution of the United States. Providing for the direct election of senators.

The blood in the veins is red as it is in the arteries, though perhaps a darker red. The difference in shade is so slight that it is impossible to say from the color of the blood whether bleeding is from a vein or from an artery, ordinarily. If the blood spurts up with each heart beat that indicates that it is from an artery; bleeding from a vein is a steady flow. Believe me, children, when one is operating all blood is just red.

My Story of Atlanta SAM W. SMALL

Sherman Reaches Atlanta In June (1864) the contending ar mies were facing each other above Marietta. Sherman's line of commu nication by rail with his sources of supply in the north was open and free from any breaking attacks by the decimated Confederate forces.

Johnston had need of every man he could procure to maintain his reby open battle as long as a general engagement could be avoided. In that wisdom was vindicated by subsequent wisdom was vindicated by subsequent

The bombardment continued and grew in figure pages and continued and grew in figure pages. That brought Atlanta into the zone of fighting operations. Then began the enveloping movements by Sherman that meant the forced concentration of Johnston's army in the fortifications of Atlanta. Sherman's plan was to clear the open country and set up a reducing siege of the city. In this his tactics were successful, being suddenly aided by the action of President Davis in summarily removing General Johnston from command of the Confederate army. General Hood was substituted because as the president explained, he was "a fighting man."

The Fabian policy of Johnston had exasperated the Confederate executive. He believed that Hood could and would beat Sherman in genera! engagements Inspiration (taking in air) helps to draw blood through the veins toward the heart. Normal expiration (which means merely letting the air out of the chest) has no appreciable effect. but forced expiration, as in blowing wind instruments, tends to oppose the venous circulation; violent or pro-longed expiration commonly obstructs the return of blood so that veins in the neck and head may be seen stand-The large trunk veins constitute a

That strange psychology which ig-nores war as a science and looks upon it as a game of pluck and luck pos-sessed our people absolutely. But on the other side, the removal f Johnston and the substitution of of Johnston and the substitution of Hood as Confederate commander put a new confidence in the heart of Sher-man. He had the measures of both men. He knew Hood had been called to make bettle and wall deto make battle and would do it. So he judged that his own best chance for victory was to force a decision before Hoot could develop a new and formidable plan of operation. They are generally more superficial, nearer the surface and less supported and protected by muscles, bones and other structures than the arteries are. They play a passive role, merely conveyors for the returning blood, and the pressure of the blood in the veins is much less than the pressure in the arteries. The flow of blood in the veins is slower than the flow in the arteries.

The veins are equipped with valves which generally prevent backflow of the blood, and by aid of the valves the blood, and by aid of the valves the blood is driven onward in the veins, by the pressure of the voluntary muscles upon the veins, by the suction effect of the chest during the intake of ait into the lungs, to some The fall of the first shell in the

"Topsy and Eva" is a musical comedy treat of a distinctive type, a joy from start to finish. There will be three more performances of it at the Atlanta theater, tonight and tomorrow, matinee and night.

Unusual success is being scored this week at Loew's Grand theater by "Keyhole Kameos," the novelty song and dance revue offered by 12 people headed by Jack Mundy. There are eight pretty girls of youth and talent in the revue and they form an attractive supporting cast to the leading comedian. Raymond and Royce appear on the bill in a blackface comedy novelty entitled "Southern Humor," in which they feature songs and dances. Grace and Eddie Parks present a clever sketch, "A Bungalow of Beauty," while Mabel Drew, in a cycle of songs and the Ruby Latham trio in "An Aerial Classic," complete the bills. The best way is to form the habit of taking a full warm bath every day, or night if you prefer it; then, as an extra precaution, clear the pores of your face before retiring by using a cleansing cream, or by scrubbing, and close the pores afterward by a generous rinsing with very cold water.

NEW GOLF BALL Yankees Facing Season Full of Doubt and Haze

In Monte Carlo their hoat tells them they are to do as they please, gir them pienty of spending money, and places a car at their disposal. Hargrave renews acquaintance with the charming Princess Stephanic Putralka, who is in love with his but Sir Hargrave finds himself falling in love with Violet.

INSTALLMENT XXIII. A Tense Moment.

The marauder, whoever he might have been, had scaled the high wall which encircled the villa, with amazing agility, and disappeared in a tangled orchard of olive trees with thick copses here and there-a strip of land half cultivated and half allowed to run wild. Hargrave, with his hands upon the wall, paused.

"I don't think so, Johnson," he decided. "The fellow may be taking cover anywhere in there. I think we'll give him best,"

Hargrave made his way back to the car. Violet, the sash of her dressing gown now tied around her, was standing panting in the avenue.

She sobbed with relief as Hargrave appeared.

"O, I'm so thankful you didn't go after him," she cried. "Come into the house. Come now, quickly-quicker!"

She forced him to hurry. He asked her questions, but she took no notice. It was not until after she had shut the front door that she drew a long breath of relief. They passed into the lounge, and she sank exhausted into a chair. Hargrave poured out some water from a carafe upon the sideboard, and gave it to her.

"Tell me how you happened to appear just in time?" he asked. "I always wake for your return," she reminded him. "I like to watch the lights and to see you turn in. Then I go to sleep again afterwards."

"My dear child!" he murmured.

"Well, it's foolish, but I like to do it. This morning I woke with a start. I couldn't hear the car, and yet I fancied there was something moving outside. I saw it was five o'clock, and I got out of bed. I put on my dressing gown, pushed open the window softly, and stood on the balcony. There was a man standing in the shadow of that cypress tree near the gate looking along the road. At first I nearly called out. Then I thought I would wait. While I stood there, I saw the flashing of your lights and heard your horn. So did he, I suppose, for he left the gate, came up the avenue, keeping in the shadow of the shrubs, and hid behind a syringa bush. Then I saw him put his hand in his pocket and draw something out that looked like a pistol. I flew downstairs to try to stop you."

"Which you did," Hargrave told her quietly. "My dear, it was brave of you. If that man really meant mischief-and it certainly seemed like it-you have probably saved my life. Both the windows of the car were down, I was leaning out, and I don't see how he could possibly have missed me."

"But why have you enemies," she asked, bewildered-"you, the most generous, the kindest of men?"

"He smiled at her a little sadly.

"There are many people," he assured her, "who would call me neither kind nor generous."

"Then they don't know you," she declared passionately.

She was leaning towards him, her lips a little parted, her eyes shining. The sheer beauty of her against that dark background, with shining. The sheer beauty of her against that dark background, with the joy of the morning already beginning to stream in through the windows, almost took his senses away. He stood and looked at her, and something that was almost fear stole into his heart. The words of the Hungarian woman flamed in his memory, youth burned in his veins, the self-control of long habitude tottered. He felt the call of her eyes, the call of her fresh, young life, for the affection which was her heritage. An emotional craving, he told himself, feverishly born of the hour and the danger through which they had passed. A clock close at hand struck shrilly, breaking in upon the tenseness of the moment. He found a curious relief in listening to and following the mechanical sounds.

"Six o'clock," he counted. "My dear, you must go to bed. You're cold down here."

He had moved away; the spell was broken. Her eyes followed him

He had moved away; the spell was broken. Her eyes followed him round the room as he fastened the windows and opened the door.

"Come along," he insisted.
She rose wearily to her feet. A sudden darkness seemed to have crept under her eyes. For a moment he wondered whether she too had felt something of the resurgent passion of those few seconds. Her thrust the idea aside, but he dared not trust himself to speech. They walked side by side up the smooth and shining stairs, his hand resting gently upon her shoulder; she walking with the still, detached air of a ghost. Outside her room, he raised her fingers to his lips—cold little fingers they were. The closing of his own door behind him seemed like the attainment of some fiercely craved for yet hated sanctuary. Hargrave awoke after a few hours of troubled sleep with a sense of dangers escaped. Of the bullet which had missed him by a few feet he thought nothing; of those few minutes with Violet, when she had lingered with him alone in the deserted, shadowful rooms, still quivering with excitement, still, both of them, a little unbalanced by the hoverings of tragedy, he thought a great deal. He found himself going back in his thoughts to the beginning of their acquaintance, recollecting the look almost of scorn which she had flashed upon him, a stranger, when he had first hinted at his proposition, her relief when she had realized her misunderstanding He had accepted his trust then without a moment's demur. He had taken no thought of possible miracles—for it was a miracle which had happened, he told himself as he listened to the water running into his bath. He was able to tell himself truthfully that in London she had been simply and solely the object of Philip Gorse's suggested experiment. What she had become now, he dared not attempt to analyze. He was a little tired when François presented him with his bathrobe. His limbs' felt heavy. There was a weariness of body as well as of head. He counted the time since his visit to Harley street; already nearly two months had passed. This was probably the beginning. There was a slight pain as he swung himself out of bed. He gave his orders for the Even when he found Violet lingering over her breakfast on the balcony he could do no more than smile a welcome to her as she sank into a chair. She looked at him pathetically. The sight of her, untired, fresh, beautiful, strong, for all her delicate girlhood, brought him a wave of depressing sanity. "I'm sure you haven't slept," she murmured. "Let me give you your coffee."

'What about you?" he asked. "I went to bed at half-past nine," she confessed, laughing, and I slept until four. "It really didn't seem to be worth while going out last night, and tonight Robert has promised to take me to the Carlton—so, you see, I really had a night's sleep before—". She broke off with a little shiver. "Are you going to the police about that man?" she concluded.

"It scarcely seems worth the trouble," he replied. "I couldn't describe him. Johnson went round this morning, though. Francois told me when I had my bath that they took a great many notes but had nothing to say.'

Andrews brought out a salver laden with letters and telegrams. Hargrave looked at them a little wearily, selecting the latter and leaving the former unopened. Goise was coming out to join his mother, who had a villa at Mentone. Marston was leaving that day for a consultation with his client. He pushed the rest of his letters towards Violet.

"Open them," he begged. "I am afflicted this morning with an intolerable laziness. If they are invitations, refuse them."

"What fun!" she murmured. "I am now established as your secretary."

She indulged in a little grimace, as she tore open one of the envel-few lines scrawled upon it.

"Mademoiselle Diane," she announced, "still awaits your promised

"Both?" she repeated, with a slight lift of the eyebrows. "I like being alone with you best."

"You're a flattering child," he replied, "but, when I come to think of it, I'm afraid I've rather neglected your brother. We'll take him; too, of it, I in alread if the wants to come."

Miss Atlanta Buys Linen With Tips She Salvaged From New York Waiter

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

At a recent debutante bridge-tea a group of Atlanta girls and visit-ing belles sat cosily around chatting merrlly of Christmas experiences. In retrospect, gaieties of various types, presents received, new scalps In retrospect, gaieties of various types, presents received, new scalps attached and many subjects of interest came up for discussion. Many of those present had just returned from delightful trips, not a few had been visiting some old school girl friend in a distant city, several had marvelous yarns to tell of the Florida resorts and some had been to eastern marts for winter outfits-or, perhaps, trousseaux. Each had many beautiful new possessions to tell of, new fur coats, darling little dancing frocks, dainty lingerie or some rare piece of jewelry.

The young hostess who had just returned from a three months' stay with her charming mother at one of Gotham's most modern and luxurious hotels told an experience which was delightful to listen to.

Her generous-hearted mother, under whose chaperonage she was, knew no limit, apparently, to the tipping problem! There were hourly tips to the bell-boy, the maid, the door man, the waiter and every other employee of this big place. This tipping proposition, on a three months' stretch, acquired such tremendous proportions that the younger member of this twosome decided to take at least a part of the matter under her direct surveillance.

New Order of Things.

Accordingly she started a new order of things!

In the dining room, after each meal and after her mother would benignly deposit the generous tip on the cloth beside her plate and turn to leave the room, little Miss Atlanta would deliberately divide the amount left by the plate, put the rescued half into her own purse, and still leave a generous amount for the waiter.

"And let me show you what I The girls are expected to come

So, in your mental tab on the charms of beauty, prestige and cleverness, add that—the greatest of all charms—rare practicability to this girl's list!

A rivalry between all college fraternities, with invitations to extend, seems to be that of seeing which can send out the most original one. Old, conventional forms are absolutely abandoned. Nothing at all, if not something new, seems the order. This suits us. We believe heartily in encouraging originality of thought. Notelling where such a lend will end..

"And let me show you what I bought with my salvage," said the bright, young hostess.

Up the steps she flew to return immediately with a charming looking little package all bewrapped in tissue paper.

"A lovely piece of lingerie for your hope chest, I bet!" said one of the girls.

"Indeed, no! A piece of linen for my hope-LESS chest!" said the hostess.

With this, she exhibited the most wonderful pair of fillet and Madeira linen pillow cases! Wasla Mr. Hammond Weds Mr. Hammond At Church Ceremony data from the Good Samaritan clinic, and Professor Willis Sutton, of the Atlanta public schools were outstanding speakers at the meeting Thursday of the Atlanta council of the Parent-Teacher's association at Edison hall.

Mrs. Arthur Tufts, a visitor to the meeting, made an informal address on child training. She urged that children be induced to really want to do right and not to do right simply because they are taught that they must. She emphasized the value of positive moral training compared with negative. She stressed the importance of organized women taking an interest in the coming extra session of the legislature; that women study legislative measures to be introduced and especially the measure of educational interest that will be considered by the session. She azked that opinions of prominent Georgia educators be secured on the actual value of the proposed educational bills.

Mr. Sutton spoke at length on technical school problems. He presented the suggestion of all-day school sessions and discussed the advisibility of hot lunch to be served to school children in the middle of the day.

Charles D. Barney & Co., one of the largest stock exchange firms here, has just published a pamphlet on Bethlehem Steel, giving a detailed analysis of that company's position and outlook. Wall Street Surprised By Announcement of Increase In Federal Reserve Bank Rediscount Rate After Market's Close — Low Renswed Rate In Call Money.

New York, January 7.—Wall street was taken completely by surprise to-day by the announcement after the market's close of an increase in the Federal Reserve bank rate from 31-2 to 4 per cent. Opinion differed as to the effect on the stock market of the unexpected news. Some people predicted that with the news out of the way, the market would advance. The majority, however, expected the market to open down.

New York, January 7.—(P)—Revival of speculative interest in the public utility shares was one of the outstanding features of today's irregularly higher curb market. New York, January 7.—(P)—The New York Federal Reserve bank, after retaining a 3 1-2 percent rediscount rate for almost a year in the face of recent advances elsewhere, today followed the lead of other reserve institutions in establishing a 4 percent rate. The new charge will go into effect tomorrow.

While the action came at a time when Wall street was flooded with returning funds from the year-end disbursements of divide ds and interest, it nevertheless had been foreshadowed by a steady increase in borrowings at this center and a gradual tightening of credit conditions throughout the country. The change brings the New York rate into closer alignment with open market rates for call and time funds, which recently have ranged between 4 and 6 perceat.

CAPITALIZATION

(Authorized and to be presently issued)

Common B Stock (no par value).....

The Common A Stock is entitled to preferential cumulative dividends of $3 per share per annum, payable January 15, April 15, July 15 and October 15, before any dividend on the Common B Stock. Subject to this prior right, the Common B Stock is entitled to non-cumulative dividends of $3 per share in any year. Both classes of stock participate equally share for share in additional dividends in any year. The Common A and Common B Stocks participate equally share for share in distribution of assets in liquidation. The Common A and Common B Stocks have equal voting rights except that the Common B Stock has the right to elect a majority of the directors and the Common A Stock the remainder, unless at the time of election the company is in default with respect to two quarterly dividends on the Common A Stock, or with respect to earnings, as provided in the charter, in each of which cases the Common A and Common B Stocks vote equally share for share in the election of directors. Central Union Trust Company of New York, Transfer Agent. The National Park Bank of New York, Registrar.

From his letter to us, Mr. Frederick B. Patterson, President of the company, summarizes as follows:

BUSINESS

The National Cash Register Company has been organized under the laws of Maryland to acquire the entire assets and business of The National Cash Register Company (an Ohio corporation), established in 1882 and to-day the largest manufacturer of cash registers in the world. The business has grown from an original investment of about $10,000 to its present size through reinvestment of earnings, with the exception of approximately $1,500,000 received prior to 1900 from the sale of stock. We are advised by counsel that certain legal proceedings, pending and threatened, against that company will not seriously affect the assets or business. Sales agencies are maintained in every state of the United States and, directly or through subsidiaries, throughout most of the world. In the United States there are more than 230 sales agencies with over 1,400 sales representatives. The domestic and foreign organizations include more than 10,000 people. The principal plant at Dayton, Ohio, consists of 23 buildings, with a total floor space of over 44 acres, and is considered a model industrial plant. The manufacture of several hundred sizes and types of cash registers meets the varied demands of practically all lines of business.

MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL The management will be in the hands of the men who have successfully conducted the business. Mr. Frederick B. Patterson, the son of the late Mr. John H. Patterson, the founder of the business, will be President, and will own a majority of the Common B Stock. EARNINGS Earnings of The National Cash Register Company (Ohio), as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., adjusted to include the earnings of foreign subsidiary companies, as taken from the companies' financial returns, shown both after deduction of employees' profitsharing participations and before deduction of employees' profit-sharing participations, in both cases after depreciation and all other charges and federal income taxes at current rates, have been as follows: $6,199,613

1919......$4,640,414 1920...... 3,663,712 5,789,600 3.556.348 4.974.801 6.539.889 1923...... 3,689,571 6.534.822 1924...... 5,063,547 1925*..... 5,942,304 7.807.596

The employees' profit-sharing plan heretofore in effect, the basis and amount of which have varied from time to time, has been discontinued and instead 150,000 fully-paid shares (371/2%) of the Common B Stock are being set aside for employees. DIVIDEND RECORD of 35 years—except 1898, when a 200% stock dividend was paid. Current assets, as at November 30, 1925, amount to $32,459,392, compared with current liabilities of $5,695,456, as shown by a pro forma balance sheet as at that date of The National Cash Register Company (Maryland) prepared by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. from the books of The National Cash Register Company (Ohio), giving effect to the capitalization of the former. Net assets, as shown on such balance sheet, amount to $32,729,348, including domestic and foreign patents (more than 1,200 in number) and good will at $1. Property and equipment, recently appraised at sound values by The American Appraisal Company at not less than $20,000,000, is included at only $6,377,338. The latest financial returns of the foreign distributing companies and branches show net tangible assets in excess of $7,250,000 which item is carried on the balance sheet at $2,948,156. Substituting in the balance sheet the amounts of $20,000,000 and $7,250,000, as above, net assets would amount to over $50,000,000.

Through the issue of its stock The National Cash Register Company (Maryland) will effect the acquisition of The National Cash Register Company (Ohio).

We offer this stock for delivery if, when and as issued and accepted by us, subject to approval of legal proceedings by our counsel. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about January 11, 1926, in the form of temporary stock certificates, or interim receipts of Dillon, Read & Co.

Further information is contained in our circular which may be had on request.

Dillon, Read & Co.

New York, January 7 .- (AP)-Overshadowing all other developments in investment circles today was the long awaited increase to 4 per cent in the New York Federal Reserve. rediscount rate. While the announcement did not come until an hour after the close of the stock exchange it aroused widespread interest among bond dealers and created considerable activity in over-the-counter dealings, Liberty bonds particularly moving toward lower levels.

The tighter credit conditions, implied by the change in the rate, had plied by the change in the rate, had little effect on the day's actual bond trading. Prices followed an upward course throughout the session with buying orders scattered over a wide list of foreign government and domestic railroad, public utility and industrial liens.

Special impetus to the advance in the railroad group was given by fa-dustrial liens.

Special impetus to the advance in the railroad group was given by favorable news regarding the carriers, including the announcement of last year's record-breaking car loadings, preliminary estimates of higher December earnings and publication of November figures showing a substantial gain in net income. Convertible bonds of the Delaware and Hudson and Norfolk and Western—two roads in which special merger and segragation developments are understood to be pending—jumped 2 to 4 points, respectively, and more moderate gains were recorded by Denver and Rio Grande 5s, Peoria and Eastern income 4s, Iron Mountain refunding 4s, Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s and Frisco income 6s.

1 Chicago, January 7 .- The wheat reversed its action of Wednesday and with increased pressure broke 4 7-8 to a low of $1.76 for May, showing 9 1-2c under the high of last week. Numerous stop loss orders were uncovered under $1.78 and with houses with eastern connections aggressive sellers the decline was easilatained.

July dropped to $1.51 3-4. Closing trades were at net losses of 3 1-4@ 4 3-8c with May $1.76 1-2 to $1.76 1-4. and July $1.52 to $1.52 1-8. 1-4, and July $1.52 to $1.52 1-8.

Corn showed considerable strength early with May at the top 88 1-8c, or 7-8c over the finish of Wednesday, but the market weakened with wheat and closed 5-8c lower with May 86 3-4 to 86 5-8c and July 88 3-8 to 88 1-2c, the finish being at the bottom.

Russia offered a cargo of wheat for January-February shipment to Liverpool at equal to $1.86 1-2 per bushel, although reported to have taken 250,000 barrels of flour from Canada recently, and some wheat from Bulgaria. Houses with New York connections were persistent sellers at Winnipeg which closed 3 1-8 to 3 1-4c lower.

While the corn market averaged bigher there was a break toward the last in sympathy with corn and the finish was about the bottom. There finish was about the bottom. There was no material pressure other than local operators. Commission houses were on the buying side early. Trade in the aggregate was light. Spot basis was about unchanged with no increase in country offerings to arrive. Eastern demand showed no improvement. Local interests will load 500,000 bushels onts and 250,000 bushels rye into vessels for winter storage in order to make storage room for corn. Further improvement in the southern demand for cash oats was reported in the west and Minneapolis sold 179,000 bushels for shipment.

And Reviews Of Aged Eccentric To Serve One Year

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.—(A)—The legal battle, which saved George Remus, Liciannati bootleg king, from a one-year sentence in the Dayton, Ohio, jail after he had served a term in Alanta penitentiary, was renewed to day when District Attorney Haveth tric attorney, who made a virtual stranger beneficiary of his $250,000 estate, was revoked by County Judge of estate, was revoked by County Judge of maintaining a nuisance at Death DuBose here Thursday, following a Cotton Letters.

JOHN F. CLARKE & Co.

New York, Januaryq 7.—Cotton exhibited considerable strength during the first three considerable strength during the first three colours of the session under influence of January and March by both domestic and foreign trade interests and shorts covering. October was under the pressure of sale by leading spot people. Offerings increases in March over 20.10 and may around 19.65 and in the last hour all early gain was lost on heavy selling here by New Orleans. Exports were 17,000 bules. There was no fresh news. The market looks a trading affair awaiting developments with many in favor of purchases on decided reactions. DuBose here Thursday, following a New Orleans, January 7.—Tending to firm predictions for a slow but strevival in the trade demand with the oing of the new year, Liverned long court battle.

The action was asked by a nephew revival in the trade demand with the opening of the new year. Liverpool reports a good demand for spot cotton there. And sales at the 10 reporting southern markets yeaterday were the largest in nearly a month amounting to 34,000 bales, while sales of cotton goods are increasing in the borthern markets.

Recently Manchester reported a decided improvement in the demand for cloths from India, and today's advices from Manchester are to effect that a large business in cloths is pending with Russia, which country is also reported to be in the market for spot cotton in America.

Our Liverpool correspondents cable, "Retof McArthur, Luther McArthur, of California, who charged that his uncle had been influenced in signing the will bequeathing his estate to George Rafferty, real estate dealer of this city Rafferty took McArthur into his home and cared for him for several months before his death last July, and it was for this, McArthur said in his will, that he wanted to give him his for-cotton in America.

Our Liverpool correspondents cable, "Bet-ter feeling gaining ground here and in Man-chester." Liverpool made a full response to vestectar's advance in America, attributed to local buying, short covering and trade alling. The technical-position of the mar-tet is strong, especially as regards near solitions, owing to the small certificated took here and in New York. Fifteen hundred pages of testimony was taken in the will contest bearing, which has extended over several weeks.

McArthur at one time was a brilliant attorney and publisher of Dodge ville, Wis. In later years he be-came careless in personal appearance. and, according to testimony in the trial, had begged on the streets, al-though possessing a good-sized for-

New York, January 7.—Spot cotton houses advise us their search for desirable stock daily confirms statements that cotton of grades ranging from the lowest quality suitable for delivery on the New York Cotton Exchange and from that grade upward, is extremely difficulty to locate and far too hard to purchase to indicate any attractiveness in contracting to deliver what is not already in hand. Rafferty's attorneys said the decision would be appealed.

C. P. ELLIS & CO. New Orleans, January 7.—Trading continues light and the market appears to be marking time awaiting fresh incentive. It becomes easily oversold on moderate declines and as easily overbought on the advances. We are inclined, therefore, to expect a continuance of trading markets within a moderate range until possibly the indications as to the next planting furnish the inspiration for a decided price movement either one way or the other.

New Orleans, January it.—Cotton resumed the upward trend at the start today and advanced a dollar a bale. It maintained most of its gains until in the afternoom when considerable profit-taking developed on account of the holiday here Friday and prices dropped back to the level of previous finals. prices dropped back to the level of previous finals.

Trading sentiment was influenced to some extent by several cables from Germany asking that further shipment of spots be deferred on account of depressed business conditions. Liverpool on the other land sent the most optimistic views of several weeks and stated that a feeling of optimism was spreading there and at Manchester.

Trading sentiment was influenced to some ducts over the railroad tracks at Cenducts over the railroad tracks at Cenducts over the mayor said be would go before the joint commitsed and later before the public service commission to obtain formal consent chester.

The New Orleans and Liverpool markets were extremely steady for the first hour which caused some scattered outside buying to come in from the south. The offerings were well taken, the principal selling apparently coming as hedge sales being placed in October. However, this selling did not weaken this position at all. The market towards the noon hour quieted down with very little activity evident. In the early afternoon, March contracts sold above the old high registered last week. GEORGIA—FAYETTE COUNTY.
Whereas E. S. Ward represents to the court in his petition, duly filed and entered on record, that he has fully administered Mrs. E. A. Ward's estate, this is, therefore, to cite all persons concerned, kindred and creditors, to show cause, if any they can, why said administrator should not be discharged from his administration, and receive letters of dismission, on the first Monday in February, 1928.

J. J. DAVIS, Ordinary.
